

Style Summary

In the Practice style, the role of the teacher is to make all subject matter and logistical decisions and to provide private feedback to the learners. The role of the learner is to individually and privately practice a task while deliberately making nine specific decisions. These decisions include location, order of tasks, starting time, pace and rhythm, stopping time, interval, initiating questions for clarification, attire and appearance, and posture. The developmental process of independence begins with the shifting of the nine decisions in Practice Style.
